

Our students as winners of the BOSS – Business Olympics for Secondary Schools competition.

Ari Aleman Török, Zalán Léber and Andrej Botond Rácz won 9th place in the BOSS – Business Olympics for Secondary Schools competition. They were competing for the titles of the best virtual managers with as many as 94 teams from the entire world.

On 08.11.2021 BOSS - Business Olympics for Secondary Schools competition began. 95 teams from 46 countries competed against each other for the titles of the best managers titles.

Thanks to Revas Business Simulation Games, the participants were managing their own virtual travel agencies for 7 virtual months. During this time, they played 7 rounds, making realistic business decisions and testing various strategies for introducing services to the market. Virtual managers were competing in 11 virtual markets adjusted to the time zones of their schools. The competition in every market was very fierce, and the level of some decisions surprised even the organizers of the competition.

We should be proud because students from our school: Ari, Zalán and Andrej under the supervision of their teacher, Ms Dhanya Seshan, finished the competition on the 9th place!

BOSS competition – what is it?

Business Olympics for Secondary Schools is an international business competition for secondary schools organized by Revas. Participants in teams of 3 play the roles of virtual managers and compete for customers in virtual markets.

The main aim of the competition was to form appropriate business attitudes in secondary school students from around the world. - says Wojciech Pitura, the CEO of Revas.

Business Simulation Games

When using simulations from Revas, students run virtual companies. Business Simulation Games are educational tools, thanks to which the students are able to make real business decisions in a safe, virtual environment.

During the competition, the main task of the participants was to manage a virtual company in such a way that would help them achieve the highest possible result. Students were facing real managerial challenges like, for example, reacting to decisions of the competition and adapting their own offer to changing market conditions.

„Business Simulation Games reflect the competitive market that is constantly changing. In comparison to traditional learning, which is based on theoretical textbooks, trying their hands at simulations enables students or managers to learn and gain experience by making realistic business decisions. Thanks to participation in the competition, students were able to manage their virtual companies as a result of which they improved their skills in real life” – explains Elżbieta Szczepaniak, Managing Partner at Revas.

Summary

Congratulations to our students for taking part in the competition! We are very proud of the fact that our school provides them with a space for development and gaining international experience. We are looking forward to the next edition of the competition!
